Barbara Belseth

Saturday,
April 13th
2-3pm

The Blackstone River Valley in 1918, the seat of the Industrial revolution, offers employment to hopeful immigrants. But while the Great War moves toward its bloody end, the Spanish Flu ravages the population in Massachusetts.

How will Norwegian immigrants Trygve and Valle Lee thrive and keep their faith in God as they face this danger and the fragility of life? Will the surgical skills of the 1920s keep Trygve alive? Will returning to their family back in Norway prove to be even more difficult than acclimating to American culture?

Follow the Lee family as they attempt to put down roots in small town America.

Join Barbara for a fascinating discussion and fun giveaways!

Barbara Belseth grew up in Hudson, Massachusetts surrounded by her warm extended Norwegian family. This story was handed down to her by her mother.
