The days of humankind have begun. The time of the Elves has ended. Yet unknown to all, even herself, one remains. Petra did not know her parents or where she came from. Brought up in a temple, she has to flee when a malevolent and powerful sorceress discovers her existence. On her journey, helped by her companions and a magic golden staff, she finds herself and her true destiny, for she is the Condon, the one sired by kings, who will save the world from the powers of darkness.

Joseph Bebo has lived in the Boston area since his college days. He has written a variety of stories, most of them full-length fiction novels, based on the things he likes doing and reading about.
