Celebrating Women in Fiction: History, Mystery, Romance!

Jean M. Grant, Janet Raye Stevens, and Sharon Yang love to write about strong, intelligent women. Whether in warring medieval Scotland, adversity-filled WWII home fronts, conflicted modern life, or even ranging across time itself, their heroines face their fears with intelligence, integrity, courage, and humor. Meet this trio to ask about their inspirations, their research methods for creating believable stories, their paths to publication, and more!

Sharon Healy Yang'

Sharon Healy Yang's fascination with mysteries and the 1940s inspired her novels' recapturing the era's wit, adventure, romance, and suspense. While an English professor, she was known as the lady with the 1940s hats. Now she writes full time. Find her at www.sharon-healyyang.com.

Janet Raye Stevens

Award-winning author Janet Raye Stevens wrote her first story for a class assignment. She got a C-minus. Janet now writes short stories and novel-length mystery, time travel adventures, WWII-set paranormal, and the occasional Christmas romance. Find her at www.janetrayestevens.com.

Jean M. Grant

Award-winning author Jean M. Grant writes historical and contemporary romance, women's fiction, and commercial fiction. She has a penchant for misunderstood creatures, including wounded characters. Find her at www.jeanmgrant.com.
